

About Intellectual Property Rights

- 1) We expect all participants to use and present material of which they are the author, or otherwise to credit the original author and respect his/her rights. If you are employed, we also expect you to make sure that you have the permission of your employer to contribute to THE Lifehack Datathon.

In other words: By participating in THE Lifehack Datathon, you represent and warrant the following: you will not present or use content that is copyrighted, protected by trade secret or otherwise subject to third party intellectual property rights or other proprietary rights unless you are the owner of such rights or have permission from their rightful owner to present or use the content and to grant THE Lifehack Datathon all of the rights granted here.

We recommend using only third party works that are licensed through an open source (for software), open hardware (for electronics) or creative commons license (for all other works).

- 2) Datathon participation - You as participant (or your employee if applicable) should remain the owner of all works you create during THE Lifehack Datathon. If you are employed, please do make sure you respect your terms of employment vis-à-vis your employer in terms of ownership and declaration of intellectual property. The only thing the problem statement provider(s) will ask you in return is to allow them to use your works for non-commercial and promotional purposes. However, further negotiations can be met out between the providers and the participants themselves.

In other words: All submissions to and creations during THE Lifehack Datathon remain the intellectual property of the individuals or organizations that developed them. By registering for THE Lifehack Datathon, entering a submission and creating works during THE Lifehack Datathon, however, the participant agrees that the organizers and the partners receive an irrevocable, nonexclusive, royalty-free license to use, distribute to the public, and publicly display and perform such submission and works for non-commercial and promotional purposes.